

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF DELAWARE

Inline Connection Corporation,

Plaintiff,

v.

Civil Action No. 05-866 (JJF)

Verizon Internet Services, Inc., et al.,

Defendants.

MOTION TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF SPECIFIED AOL CASE MATERIALS

Pursuant to Rule 37, Fed. R. Civ. P., Local Rule 37.1 and Paragraph 4 of this Court's form Rule 16 Scheduling Order, the Verizon defendants<sup>1</sup> respectfully move for an order compelling plaintiff Inline Connection Corporation ("Inline") to produce the following materials from the co-pending AOL case<sup>2</sup> on an attorneys-eyes-only basis:

1. Expert reports and expert depositions;<sup>3</sup>
2. Updated discovery responses served by the parties since January 1, 2006; and
3. Pleadings (including exhibits) filed in connection with previous Markman and summary judgment proceedings that are not available from the public record.

This is a narrow subset of materials from the AOL case which are available to Inline's counsel at Bingham McCutchen and the Morris Nichols firm, but which are not available to counsel for the Verizon defendants because they have been designated as confidential. Counsel for Defendants in the AOL case (i.e., AOL and EarthLink) have no objection to Inline producing these specified

<sup>3</sup> Opening expert reports were scheduled to be filed on March 3, 2006. Rebuttal expert reports will be filed in mid-June with expert depositions to be concluded by mid-July.

materials, which may contain confidential AOL or EarthLink information, to counsel for the Verizon defendants on an attorneys-eyes-only basis (see Exhibit 1).

The present motion to compel should be granted for the following reasons:

1. Fundamental Fairness. Inline sued AOL, EarthLink and Verizon in April and June of 2002, but then promptly abandoned its claims against Verizon. Inline has continued to litigate the exact same patents against AOL and EarthLink in the AOL case. As a result, Inline now has a four year head start over the Verizon defendants.

This Court granted in part Inline's motion to stay the present case pending resolution of the AOL action (D.I. 92). The Court found that the AOL case proceedings could well simplify the issues in this case and that Defendants would not be prejudiced by the stay (id. at 3). These findings, however, were necessarily premised on the Verizon defendants' counsel having fair access to developments in the AOL case, and particularly to Inline's judicial admissions and statements of position before Magistrate Judge Thyng. Otherwise, Inline's multi-year head start will continue to grow while the Verizon defendants' counsel are kept in the dark.

In fact, Inline has broadly asserted confidentiality over most of its substantive briefs, arguments and supporting factual contentions in the AOL case. Indeed, many of the basic pleadings relating to Judge Thyng's four published opinions in AOL case are not publicly available. Likewise, Inline and AOL/EarthLink exchanged updated discovery responses earlier this year, all of which have been designated confidential, setting forth their factual positions. Most recently, the parties in the AOL case have submitted opening expert reports and will soon be filing rebuttal reports and taking expert depositions – once again subject to confidentiality designations.

AOL and EarthLink have agreed that the Verizon defendants' counsel can have attorneys-eyes-only access to any AOL or EarthLink confidential information contained in the specified

AOL case materials which are the subject of this motion. Inline, however, will not produce the materials, even though they are fully available to Inline's counsel in this case at Bingham McCutchen and the Morris Nichols firm (see Exhibits 2 and 3).

2. Inline's Prior Judicial Representations. When Inline initially filed this action in the Eastern District of Virginia, the Verizon defendants promptly filed formal discovery requests calling for production of all pleadings and discovery from the AOL case in order to ameliorate what at that time was Inline's three-year head start (see Exhibits 4 and 5). Inline told the Court that it would produce all of the AOL case documents that "it is able to produce under the Protective Order in Delaware" (D.I. 46 at 6). Inline further represented that:

With respect to documents that Inline cannot now produce because they contain confidential information of entities other than Inline, Defendants claim that Inline has asserted "overbroad" claims of confidentiality that have delayed production of the Delaware documents. ... But Inline has produced and will continue to produce responsive documents without regard to any Inline claim of confidentiality. (Id., underscoring added).

AOL and EarthLink now agree that the Verizon defendants' counsel can have attorneys-eyes-only access to their respective confidential information in the limited set of AOL case materials here at issue. Despite its prior representations to the Court, Inline has not produced any documents from the AOL case since August of last year, and refuses to produce the specific documents addressed in this motion.

3. Memorandum Order (D.I. 92). The Verizon defendants believe that production of the limited AOL case materials specified in this motion would be consistent with the spirit of the Court's April 13, 2006 Memorandum Order (D.I. 92), granting Inline's motion to stay but permitting Defendants to proceed with discovery as to their unenforceability and invalidity defenses. Production of AOL case materials that are already available to Inline's counsel in this action does not impose any new substantive discovery burdens on Inline. It merely achieves a level playing field so that counsel for both parties have access to ongoing developments in the AOL case. The AOL case proceedings cannot simplify the issues in this case, as the Court's Memorandum Order contemplates, if Inline's counsel has one-sided, unfair access to the AOL case briefs and materials.

In addition, Inline's judicial admissions and statements in the AOL case are binding on Inline and its privies, and will necessarily narrow and focus Defendants' permitted discovery regarding the unenforceability and invalidity issues. For example, the Inline experts' discussion of the prior art and admissions as to the scope of the claims will narrow Defendants' focus for additional invalidity prior art and help limit discovery from the inventors, prosecuting attorneys and other witnesses with personal knowledge of events during the late 1980s and early 1990s regarding a variety of invalidity/unenforceability issues (e.g., priority data, conception, reduction to practice, prosecution laches, estoppel, enablement, written description, etc.).

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should order Inline to produce without further delay the narrow subset of AOL case materials specified on the first page of this motion.

Respectfully submitted,
